CHAPTER 33

Tad Is On The Inside Track

Mr. Jordan was just beginning to unlatch Vixen when Tad appeared at the gate.

'Hello, Dad, so you're back; anything doing?'

'No, my boy, I'm afraid not, you'll have to make my old racquet do for a while, but I'll see what we can do after the tournament; perhaps I can get you a good second-hand one, and I may be able to help you out with a dollar or two. I'm sorry, but I warned you not to expect too much.'

'Oh, it's all right, Dad,' and Tad bustled himself with the straps on the other side of the mare that his disappointment might not be too evident. 'I knew it was an off chance—why, when I was at the Dingle last Fall, Dugald wouldn't take a half day off his work for the chicken shooting—not even the first day of the season, mind you, and the Dingle Barnardo boy told me at Easter that he never even went courting Miss Enderby unless it was a Sunday or a wet day—I wish he'd got Daisy instead of her sister, there would be something doing when she wanted a new dress.'

'I guess it's best as it is, Tad, and you can put the mare away while I go in and get some supper, for afternoon tea is not very satisfying—where's mother and everybody?'

'Oh, mother and the girls are over at the tennis courts, but mother left the supper things on the table in case you wanted any—and oh, Dad, there's a letter for you on your study table, from the old country with a swell crest on it—mother thinks it's from the Dennis's father in Ireland.'

'All right, Tad, I'll find it; you may as well fix up Vixen for the night before you come in, she's not too warm to have a pail of water and she does not need any more oats, she's too gay as it is,' and Mr. Jordan walked off to the house and into his study. He picked up the letters lying on the table, two or three obviously bills and the other—yes, it was from Tom Dennis's father from the Connemara post-mark. The parson did not open it at once, but took it with him into the dining-room and laid it down unopened while he cut himself some cold meat and brought in the teapot from the kitchen stove—he would read it while he had his supper. He felt no curiosity about it, though he had vaguely wondered at its being so thick and heavy when he first picked it up, and he did not expect it would be cheerful reading. He had written to Mr. Dennis a letter of condolence when the news came of Tom's death and this of course was the answer. He left the letter lying while he ate his cold meat, and then spreading himself some bread and butter and pouring out a second cup of tea he poured his chair half back from the table and took up this letter—it certainly was unusually bulky—probably he wanted to settle up the affairs of the boys' farm; it was not likely Jack would ever come back to the West—well as note, for he was not fitted for it—but the parson sighed as he cut the envelope open and drew out its contents, so many Old Country boys had come into his life and dropped out again—too often with failure and disaster of some kind, but this was the saddest ending of them all.

As he opened out the letter a second smaller envelope fell out, and as he read its superscription all his remiscient sadness vanished.—'Entrusted to Mr. Jordan for Miss Evelyn Hope, from Tom's mother'—matters must have gone further than with Tom and Evelyn than he had dreamt of, and the poor girl had been facing her life at the Dingle all these months with a broken heart and not a soul to help written sheets for himself in a firmer stronger hand.

Mr. Jordan unconsciously squared his shoulders and pulled himself together mentally as he opened them and pressed out the creases of their folding that he might read them the better, but he had not gone beyond the first few lines when his self-controlled deliberation gave way to a startled cry—'at first wondering and unbelieving—'Tom Alive?' and then repeated in a slower and deeper tone as the conviction came home, 'Tom Lewis is alive—', and then without a pause hardly to take breath he read the long letter through to the end. The parson was not usually given to the display of his emotions, but it came at the end of a long and forwards, between his joy at Tom's escape and his sorrow for poor Jack, so that as he ended his reading Mr. Jordan's another emotion—his pity—his feeling—He rose hastily from the table and threw open the window —there seemed no air in the room. By force of habit he put his hand in his pocket and drew out his pouch and pipe, and then filled the latter and lighted it though his fingers trembled so that he could hardly hold the match. For some minutes he had paced backwards and forwards up and down the room, pausing now for a moment to scrutinize a picture that was hanging a little out of the square on the wall now to pick up one of the children's toys lying untidily on the floor. By degrees he recovered his composure and came back again to the table and sat down and re-read the letter, more slowly and deliberately this time. It was in its facts the same strange story that Tom had written in his letter to Evelyn—which was still lying in Mary Ann's bottom drawer—but as he re-read it there were questions arose in Mr. Jordan's mind which had not impressed him. He had not on his first reading. 'Why had Evelyn never received Tom's letter?—Was it some mishap in the mail service, or—' but he could not carry that question further now, he would stop at what was certain, and it was certain the letter had never reached her hands—but what did Tom's father mean by saying, I understand from Mr. Tom's letter that he entrusted the secret of his attachment to your son, Tad; excuse me if I have got the name wrong, and that perhaps he can throw a little light on the situation which is still to us rather uncertain and distressing. Mr. Jordan read the sentence a second and as third time, becoming more puzzled each time. How in the world could Tad know anything about it? The probabilities of there having been an understanding between Tom and Evelyn had been discussed in the boy's presence more than once, and he had never given a sign of being in possession of any secret—surely the boy would have told his mother. For a moment Mr. Jordan was vexed to think that Tad had learned so well the lesson of being silent about what his parents talked of in the family circle; however, he could find out the truth, and going to the window he galled out loudly, "Tad, I want you, right away."

L. E. ROY, General Merchant, Chauvin

An Irishman's Luck

"All right, Dad. I'm coming as soon as I've run the buggy into the shed."
"Never mind the buggy, I want you now."
A minute afterwards Tad hurried into the room.
"Why, what's the matter, Dad, you're not sick?" for he was quick to see that his father was much disturbed.
"Oh, no, Tad, but I've had a very surprising letter, and it has upset me a good deal—it's about Tom Dennis."
"I guessed it was when I saw the post-mark—mother had half a mind not to give it to you till the morning, she knew you would be tired, and it would be sure to be kind of miserable like—"

"Well it's not quite that, Tad, but there has been a great mistake made about—about the two Dennis boys." "Why, what mistake. Dad—they're not both dead?"
"No, I put in the list in the paper—it was poor Jack who was killed and Tom is alive and well."
"Tom alive! and for a moment Tad was speechless. Really! Really alive—is that true?—Oh, isn't that great! Why—why—everything will come right again—and aren't you glad, Dad, I feel as if I could shout."
"Hush, hush, boy, remember his brother is dead, and his father and mother have had all their grieving twice over—and, Tad, there is a great deal in the letter about Tom and Miss Raye, I cannot half understand it, and his father says you can explain it all."

"Oh, that's all right, Dad, you need not worry about that—of course, I've been on the inside track."
"Why, what do you mean by the 'inside track'?" asked Mr. Jordan impatiently, "inside track of what?"
"Of this love business and all that kind of thing," replied Tad rather awkwardly. "It seems all rather tom-tom-sing his alive and come and do his own courting—but there was a ring I was to give her and a sort of a softish kind of message if Tom got killed and she seemed to feel too bad about it, but if she seemed to worry along all right I was to keep the ring and any nothing—just keep mum, you know, Dad."

"Well, of all the commissions to entrust to a mere child like you! It's the ring, and why did you never say a word to Miss Raye or your mother?"
"The ring is in my jacket's pocket—I wear it sometimes when I'm by myself—Tom said it was for me if I didn't give it to Miss Raye, and I've been beastly uncomfortable about it. I very nearly told her when I was up at the Dingle at Easter, but she seemed so rommy when I tried to talk to her about Tom, and said I was a cruel boy when I asked her if she wasn't sorrier it was Tom that was killed instead of Jack, and the next minute she started off laughing about some badly joke of Daisy's, and there was Mr. Bert sniffling around her all the time and she so nice to him as you please—and I just thought she didn't deserve to know that—that Mr. Tom was that in the girl's bet I'll never hand on another girl."

"Well, Tad, I suppose you did what thought best, but I'm sure you were wrong in thinking Miss Raye did not care."
"Why didn't she say so, then?" interrupted Tad rather respectfully.
"You'll grow wise in some things when you grow older, my boy," replied his father. "In the meantime, since you know so much you may as well know the rest. As soon as Tom discovered the dreadful mistake about the report of his death, he wrote to Miss Raye and told his own story, and if he hears by the rest of July that she loves him." Mr. Jordan found his telling of a love story to his own small boy increasingly embarrassing, "why he will come straight out here on sick leave and marry her and take her back with him to Ireland, and if she doesn't write and accept him, why he will go home to his father and mother and that will be the end of it—"

do you see?"
"But his letter to her, Dad?"
"Why, that she never got, and, poor girl, she doesn't even know he's alive, and altogether it is rather alumb—and I don't know what to do for the best."
"Oh, if that's it, Dad, you leave it to me. The holidays begin on Friday, and it wouldn't matter if I missed school to-morrow and I could get a lift up north with the mailman and I could go to the Dingle and tell Miss Raye and give her the ring—that is if you're sure she hasn't gone back on Mr. Tom."
"Oh, I'm certain enough about that, but the rest of it is not so simple. You see, Bert Enderby has asked Eve—"

Winter Traffic Will Be Heavy

Winnipeg, Oct. 21st, 1919. The past few days of cold weather have resulted in an unprecedented large number of inquiries from throughout the entire prairie provinces, for tickets, sleeping car, and boat reservations being received by Grand "Coast Pacific" Railway agents, from business men, farmers and others who yearly are taking more advantage of the opportunity of spending the winter Pickett, months either on the North Pacific Coast or in California. Mr. F. L. Pickett, Passenger Agent of the Admiral Line, whose boats ply between Victoria, Seattle and California ports, who was in the city yesterday, also confirms the above, stating that their line has never had so many applications for reservations and that the majority of these were apparently coming from the country districts, indicating further that the prairie farmers are seeking milder climates during the winter season and have the money to pay for the travel comfort and enjoyment that may be derived on these up-to-date transportation companies.

The Prince Rupert route, combining an it does a full trip through the most scenic part of the Canadian Rockies plus a 700 mile ocean voyage through sheltered waters without additional cost to the passenger, strongly appeals to the winter traveller who desires to secure the best at a minimum of expense.

The advertising done by the North Pacific tion to the advantages of the States of Oregon and Washington and the Province of British Columbia, particularly from a climatic standpoint at this season of the year, has also resulted in directing attention of many to that section of our country. In addition thereto, traffic to the Old Country is restricted, and as people will travel, every opportunity is thus afforded to see something new.

Pay Envelope OF $75,000.000

Wages Earned by Money Invested in Domestic War Loans.

A pay envelope crammed with $75,000.000 is not a hard thing to take, even if it is for a year's work. This is the amount of wages earned by Canadian investors in the Victory and other war loans, rather, it is the amount earned by the money.

Close to half of this amount is to be distributed to the fortunate investors either on November 1st or December 1st just in nice time to be reinvested in Victory Loan 1919.

People get ahead financially, not by spending interest returns on everyday things but by setting the returns back to earn more interest. Money, placed that way, rolls up like a snowball.

THE GODDESS AND THE TREE

Once upon a time the gods agreed each to select a tree, and to guard and watch over it. Jupiter chose the oak, Venus the myrtle, Hercules the poplar and the others each chose a tree. Palak, who was present, selected the olive.

"The olive shall be my tree," she said, "and my reason for choosing it is that it bears plenty of useful fruit. All the trees that you have chosen bear nothing."

Jupiter replied to her:

"Now I see that it is not without justice that you are celebrated for your wisdom, for unless there is some benefit in the things you do, it is foolish to do them for vainglory."

"Let all your actions be wise and useful."

Billy Bear: I have a bone to pick with you!
Hippo: Pardon me, sir, that's impossible—I only eat vegetables!

A GOOD TAKE IN

Have you heard this catch?
You must go up to a friend and say, "Do you know a real ten-shilling note is only worth four and six!"

When your friend replies that he doesn't believe it, you must say, "Yes it is true, four and six make ten, surely?" Then he will say how he has been caught.

THE LAD OF GRIT AND SMILES

He sang a merry lilt of cheer
"Neath cloudy skies or blue,
Until the folks he enquired with
Had learnt the rhythm too!"

He donned a cloak all laughter-hued;
A plucky garb to wear!
And lent it readily enough,
For neighbour hearts to share.

He kept a stock of jest and smile
To scatter on the way;
And those who marched beside him
Forgot the shadows grey;

And some were young and brave and strong—
And some were tired and old;
But one and all, he led them on To Hope's Fair Land of Gold!

—LILLIAN GARD.

What is it that is half an animal half part of a lady's dress, and the whole of it a flower?

A foxglove.

God has two thrones: In the highest heavens, and in the lowest hearts.
If we want to get the laws of our country correct, measure them by the golden rule.

Bran is an excellent feed for all live-pregnant animals. It is both bulky and laxative. It is unfortunate for the stockmen that this by-product is so high priced considering the quality which is available.

The Stag In The Ox-Stall

A stag, being hard pressed by hounds, took refuge in an ox-stall. One of the oxen asked him why he had fled into such a place, where he was sure to be killed.

"Ah," said the stag, "if you will let me conceal myself I will be off again at the first opportunity!"

The oxen agreed, and the stag stayed there until evening approached. Many of the farm labourers came in with bundles of fodder, but did not see him. The stag was beginning to thank the oxen, but one of them said: "We shall all be glad for you to escape, but our master has not yet been here, and nothing occupies his eyes."

Shortly after the farmer himself came in to look at his men feed the cattle. He happened to look down, and saw the stag horns sticking out of the straw. He immediately raised a hue-and-cry, and killed the poor stag.

"Nobody looks after a man's affairs so well as he does himself."

Why is a lady's belt like a road sweeper? Because it gathers up the waist (waste)

Why is a coward like butter on a hot day? Because they are both ready to run.

There is a great advantage in plowing in the fall where possible. The season for plowing preparation and sowing in the spring is short, and plowing in a preparation for spring is the operation that requires most time.

INSURE NOW AND FEEL SAFE

Canadian Pacific Railway Lands: Call in and see the price list: 20 years terms, one-tenth cash payment with application; no further payment of capital until the fourth year. Interest at six per cent per annum. If the necessarily improvements are executed in the first year, the interest will be reduced to two per cent for two years. This is a good proposition, and these lands are being rapidly absorbed. Do not delay until too late, as these lands will be turned over again at a big profit.

Hudsons Bay Lands. I have the latest prices on all the holdings of the Hudsons Bay Company and am ready to quote you at any time. The terms are:-8 equal payments with interest at seven per cent per annum. The prices are now down to a very low figure, and these lands are sure to turn out to be a good business proposition. Values will soar again, and the H.B. Lands are mighty good buying at present quotations. That quarter alongside your own will make a fine addition to your farm; and, believe me, it is better to be in on the ground floor when you buy.

Loan Companies have all kinds of Money to Loan on Improved Farm Property, First Mortgage. I am advised by one of the most reliable firms that their great concern at the present time is to find sufficient applications to take up this surplus money. Interest at eight per cent. Five or ten year terms. No commissions charged to the Mortgagor; and the costs of obtaining same were never so low as at the present time. If you are interested, call or write; but remember that there is no shortage of cash for this purpose.

ARTLAND ARGUS

The Artland yards presented a very animated scene last Tuesday week, 28th October.

Shipment of cattle were on a scale never before seen at this point. This is a most satisfactory feature and we trust that future operations will continue large, and be a source of profit and benefit to all concerned.

The actual cars loaded with fine Artland, numbered no less than 40, comprising seven cars from Ribstone thirteen from Chauvin, and the balance of twenty from Artland with 338 head.

This shipment marked an important day for the district generally and very particularly so far as Artland is so far as it has beyond question demonstrated that our ranges around here can produce the goods, and the power to maintain that position with an increasing expansion.

We understand that some of our local shippers contemplate sending out six more cars of good stuff before the close of the season.

What has also been going out pretty well. Mr Laverne informing that five cars were billed through the week before last.

The cattle shippers from this point were Ervin Neil, A. W. Robinson, Jas Semple, Garfield Lawson, L. M. Cayford and Harry Smith.

The total amount of live stock shipped out from Artland for this season always amounts to thirty-six cars. We would have liked a chat with LordShaughnessy on Artland platform when those cattle were off to Chicago. Pleasant to have impressed that worry man with the air and bustle of that scene. He so dearly loved to level the gems of his pungent sarcasm at us. And by us we mean the grain men, the cattle men and the traders of Ribstone, Chauvin and Artland—places typical of hundreds of others strung along on steel with the lashings of optimism and the way from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

All in the same boat, holding good cards and bound to win.

Nice to tell our friend that he yet would live to see the G.T.P. receiver of the "chuck" and the patient share-holder receive an interim dividend, that would have been fine for his lordship to put in his pipe.

The practical man will not hesitate a moment over investing in Victory Bonds.

It is said to see the ruin of former prosperity, such as that old derelict, the "chuck" and the patient share-holder for the traveller, presents that unhappy building next the Post Office, now a Court of Justice or a Church as occasion may require.

We met an acquaintance, who after throwing off his load of wheat "was munching a lot of hogmeat and the taste of a bottle of sham beer that odious hypocrite known as "two percent."

Where are those pleasant places of old, where the best of grub was liberally dispensed by the jolliest of people?

Verily the Artland accommodation for the teamster, the drummer, the grocer, this merry little hamlet takes the "macaroon."

As the matter stands at present the public must depend upon the good nature and kindness of a private resident and his wife.

Needless to observe, the interests of the place are being prejudicially affected.

Your attention is called to a further extension of the period of Herd Law as announced in another column.

ROBERT JONES.

Note by Editor, Chauvin Chronicle.—We are at one with our estimable editor of the Artland Argus in seeking to give accurate information. In the matter of the number of cars shipped in the large shipment of last week, as reported, there discrepancies. In the first instances, upon official information we reported forty-eight cars. As three carloads of cattle got away from the herders, these at the last minute and then unknown to the press, did not form part of the train. Mr Jukes report seems to err the other way, according to the results of our enquiry of the C. P. R. at Chauvin. The figures thus obtained were Ribstone 7, Chauvin 17, Artland 21, total 45. Perhaps the shippers will get this right when they sell the stock and pay the freight charges.

MANITOU LAKE G.G.

A meeting of the Manitou Lake Grap Growers was held at the Brady School, Friday October 31st. Mr Howells, the speaker for the evening was unavoidably prevented from being in attendance, but an interesting debate on the Farmers' Platform filled the evening in a very instructive and interesting manner. Messrs J. W. Coe, George Lawson, James McKague and Arthur Rose are to be congratulated on their oratorical developments. The meeting heartily endorsed the policy of nominating a Farmers Candidate in readiness for the election. J. W. Coe, also one of the speakers that evening, was elected as the delegate to attend the convention at Wilkie, November 7th 1919.

AN AMERICAN'S IMPRESSIONS OF CLYDESDALES AS SEEN ON 'CRAIGIE MAINS' SCOTLAND

An American visitor has recently visited Craigie Mains, where 'I unexpectedly faced what any Clydesdale lover would admit the finest sight in the animal kingdom, Bonnie Buchlyvie at the bridle. Never in the draft horse world have I seen such lofty and perfect carriage and such grace of going as this thirteen-year-old champion possesses. I have dreamed of a neck set high on sloping shoulders, sufficiently high to make the coarse, cartilaginous crest unnecessary for symmetry of line, but never until Bonnie Buchlyvie have I found the realization of this ideal. The throat springs from the shoulder a full eight inches above the shoulder joint, and the axis of the neck is so nearly perpendicular to the beautiful scapular slope that the head towers is not a big horse as compared to the continent breeds. He would weigh lay in viewing the 1919 foals. Among the mares at the farm for service to him were several with foals at side from his loins. 'True in a pod' is an unjust comparison for these youngsters, whose graceful uprightness and supple going were indelibly stamped by their famous sire. Every one was a bay, every one had the shoulder and pastern so patently his bequest, and every one had the alert response to the surroundings that measure the keenness of living. Yet they were not nervous, were not easily frightened and were not shy. They presage the kind of animal that really takes an interest in the work done. For the next two years Bonnie Buchlyvie goes to breeders' associations at 10 guinea service fees, half to be paid at service and half when the mare is foal. Mr. Kilpatrick, proprietor of Craigie Mains is to have the option on every foal born at established price, to be arranged with each association. During Bonnie Buchlyvie's absence, Craigie Mains, by Brydon Shield and Cawdor cup winner for 1918 will head the stud. Already 200 names are booked for him, and the next two years should give him his opportunity to establish himself. Probably the best mare at the Mains is Craigie Sylvie. She is by Apukwa, he by Hawaville and has the turn of top, mass of middle and greatness of going that completely fill the eye and satisfy the ideal. Although on of doors at all times, and with a three-day foal at side, she trotted the pasture with the life and spirit of a horse newly released from stable. Probably next to the Royal winner Rosagib by Dunure Footprint, she was the finest mare I saw in Britain, and there is no saying what their relative standing would be had the foal been a litter older so that the loss of bloom due to paternity had been overcome. Another great mare is the big-framed Favorite Queen, by Royal Favourite and out of the exceedingly good bred, tud Craigie Ligtant, and now at seventeen has a matchless foal by Bonnie Buchlyvie."

before reaching the average fleecing of our show horses. Perhaps the best proof of Bonnie Buchlyvie's greatness lies in his progeny. Both reserve champions at the Royal, the yearling Craigie Bay and the two-year-old filly Craigie Sunray, were by him, while a yearling filly as yet unnamed that ran in one of the paddocks at Craigie Mains had even a sweeter carriage limning the hair. But the treat really

Some Striking Figures Of Savings Deposits From Bank Statement For August
A total of $1,196,632,931 in savings bank deposits is a gratifying report that many of the countries which have emerged from war would be glad to report to-day. This is the position of Canada as revealed in the Bank statement for August.
The amount is $181,921,060 better than the same month last year, notwithstanding the fact that a good part of it was transferred to last years $21,540,778 better than July of this year.
This is a promising outlook for the Victory Loan campaign which is at present being carried on. If the depositors in Canada's savings banks were to say the word, they could subscribe the $200,000,000 needed nearly four times over. The success of the present effort should be overwhelming.

by, to marry him, and though she said "No," at the time, his mother and sister think that she could be won over in time to change her mind.

"Still, when I tell him that Mr. Tom is alive, there will be no lack coming from Mr. Bert—he's only been like a kind of substitute in a football match when one of the star players gets knocked out for a bit; when the star gets his wind he comes back into the game and the other fellow just drops out, and nobody worries about him."

"But, Mrs. Enderby will worry, and it's very awkward after a talk I had with her to-day, that I should have to take snooty part in hastening a probably inevitable disappointment for all the people at the Dingle. Mrs. Enderby will try to be glad 'om's alive, and she will be nice to Miss Raye, but in the bottom of her mind she will have a grievance against me, and things will never be quite the same again. I remember I had had this letter before I went up this morning—it would have made rather a strenuous one, but it would have been all over by now. As it is I have promised to call for Miss Raye at the school on

COE BROS' GARAGE, CHAUVIN

"Friday on my way back from a visit that would be alright Dad."

"To Mr. Bigley—it's the last day's tea. Dad's suggestion did not offer much easing up to the person for his own view to the Dingle, but after talking over with his wife far into the night the whole wonderful story of Tom's escape with its complications of anxiety to himself. It seemed the most promising solution of a problem so full of possibilities of both joy and sorrow to those whom fortune had brought within the circle of its activities. (To be continued next week)

"Suppose, Dad," suggested Tad, "that you write to Jim Hardie and tell him all about it, and ask him to tell Mr. Enderby on Friday night, and then it will get to Mrs. Enderby in a kind of roundabout way and you need not be nixed up in at all, and you can tell Miss Raye as you drive home."

"You are very ingenious, Tad," and a smile flickered for a moment on his father's anxious face, "but if there's a nasty thing to be done, it may as well be done first as last, and I hate roundabout ways. I shall go to the Dingle myself on Friday. Bert and Tom were very good friends and Bert ought to be a man about it, and if his mother chooses to think I have treated them badly, why, well, she must and I must put up with it—and I suppose I can call at the school afterwards and tell—"

"It's like to do that part of the tell interrupted Tad. "You see, that was properly my job. Only Miss Raye side-tracked me just when I got started—how's a fellow to know which is the right end of a stick when a girl acts up like that?"

"You need not apologize, Tad, for your inexperience," replied his father with a little amusement at the puzzled earnestness of Tad's question. "The diagnosing of a woman's affections still finds me only a neophyte."

"Well, I am not a never fight—if it's what you mean, Dad, and I won't do that other thing to anybody, but I should not like Mr. Tom to think I had not kept my promise."

"Well, seriously, Tad, I believe it would be much better for you to call for Miss Raye—easier both for her and for yourself, but I don't see—" and there was a long pause during which Tad, who had sat down some time before, forked over his tousled hair with both hands in search of inspiration. "At last it came—"

"Say, Dad," and another pause, "Dad, I'll know the Enderby 'Say, Dad, you know that the Enderby often use Mr. Tom's mare and board for tying around, and Miss Raye sometimes drives her to school—well—suppose you drop a line to Miss Raye tomorrow and ask the mail man to leave it at the Dingle as he goes by, and you can ask her to take the buckboard to school on Friday, and say you will drop me off somewhere as you go to Mrs. Bigley's and that I will drive her down as you find that I have another visit to make—" their patriotism, not to selfishness, but to sympathy. Self-interest is, as it were, a mechanical force—potent, it is true; capable of large and wide results. But there is in human nature a force which is more potent, more overwhelming; to which nothing seems impossible, "All that a man hath will he give for his life"—that is self-interest. But in the royalty to higher impulses men will give even life.

It is not selfishness that enriches the annals of every people with heroes and saints. It is not selfishness that on every page of the world's history bursts out in sudden splendor of noble deeds or sheds the soft radiance of benign lives. It was not selfishness that turned Gautama's back to his royal home and made the Maid of Orleans lift the sword from the altar, that held the Three Hundred in the Pass of Thermopylae, or gathered into Winkfield's bosom the sheaf of spears that chained Vicent de Paul to the bench of the gallery, or brought little starving children during the Indian famine, tottering to the relief stations with yet weaker starve, kings in their arms. Can it religion, patriotism, sympathy, the enthusiasms, the love for humanity, or the love of God—give it what name you will: there is yet a force which overcomes and drives out selfishness; a force which is the electricity of the moral universe; a force beside which all others are weak. Everywhere that men have lived it has shown its power and its day as ever, the world is full of it.
